Mike, I know it's unpleasant, but we need to address the issue of Linh Dinh. He is still on our Editors list. Did you carefully read his Wikipedia page? It really is beyond belief. He has joined the ranks of the far alt-right, and is now promoting openly racist and anti-Semitic garbage. If we keep him on there, we will be DPW's anti-racist principles.

Linh,

That last email was meant for Mike, obviously. The mistake makes a distressing situation even more so. I had intended to write you personally.

I am reacting to the recent articles linked to at Wikipedia. The material there contains openly racist claims--anti-Semitic and anti-Black. It is straight-out alt-right venom, and I am bewildered and deeply saddened that you have gone in that direction, Linh (though I'd been concerned about the credence you were giving to wacked out 9/11 stuff, and I suppose those circles cross). But this crosses a line. The "pride" you express in opposing "Jewish power," a neo-fascist trope which has nothing to do with opposing the crimes of the Zionist state, confirms your stance in the article.

I've deeply admired your work across the genres, Linh, and considered you a friend and comrade, but this mind-boggling turn is totally depressing.

Hi Kent and Mike,

Do remove me as editor, but since when is a man judged by his Wikipedia page?!

I've listed all of my race and Jewish power pieces at the top of my blog, for your reference:

<http://linhdinhphotos.blogspot.com/>

Israel is the most openly racist and war mongering state out there, so I'm proud to be on the record, loudly and clearly, as advocating for its disappearance, and since you can't oppose Israel without addressing Jewish power, I'm also proud to be unequivocal in calling it out, unlike the rest of our cowering political class, and nearly all of our intellectuals.

Jewish power has killed millions, wrecked several countries and is deforming many more, and though all of our intellectuals hate Trump, they don't dare to identify him as another servant of Jewish power, which he nakedly is, but I have, repeatedly, and I'm proud of that too.

Israel is the clearest manifestation of Jewish power, so if you're fine with it, then it's you, not me, who supports genocide and racism.

Linh, I have never met you, but have enjoyed your work.

The problem for me is that equating Zionism, a political movement, with Judaism, a religion, which is what you do when you invoke some massive abstraction like "Jewish Power." It not only confuses the issue and targets the wrong enemy, it undermines the real struggle against Zionism. I know many many Jews who are anti-Zionist and opposed to the criminal acts of the Zionist regime in Israel. Are they your enemy because they are Jews? Do you want to turn them into your enemy? Ammiel Alcalay, your fellow board member, has been a leading opponent in the US of Zionism for decades, leading the charge on BDSM. He's Jewish. "Jewish Power" is a meaningless phrase. As an artist surely you recognize the utter vapidness of such destructive abstractions.

Kent and I both have been supporters of BDSM openly and loudly at Dispatches, so you will have to stretch it a bit to call us supporters of Israel's crimes against the Palestinian people. I have been fighting that fucking battle in the trenches for almost 50 years, so please, don't accuse me or Kent of supporting Israel.

Given your work, which I deeply admire, I just don't understand why you would want to attack an entire religion and people when your argument is with a political ideology. Can you explain that to me?

Best,

Mike

Hi Kent and Mike,

Where do I attack the Jewish religion or Jews? I attack Jewish power, because of what it has done, so the emphasis here should be on power. People do not hesitate to attack white power.

Jewish power is not Zionism, so to use that word is a huge cop out.

My prose publisher, Dan Simon, is a Jew, and the editor of Unz Review, Ron Unz, is a Jew. Jewish Matthew Sharpe is a close friend who blurbed two of my books. I twice visited Jewish Henry Herskovitz in Michigan, and have written about and interviewed this remarkable man who has been holding a silent protest outside his former synagogue each Saturday for 15 years.

I'm not against Jews but only Jewish power, the way Jewish Gilad Atzmon and Israel Shamir, also Unz contributors, are against Jewish power.

Atzmon, "Jewish power is the power to suppress discussion on Jewish power."

As for black crime, every American knows about this, and lives accordingly. More than a century ago, W.E.B. DuBois wrote, "There is a widespread feeling that something is wrong with a race that is responsible for so much crime, and that strong remedies are called for." Since this is a very complicated issue, I've written thousands of words about it, but my critics don't refute or dissect me, but immediately brand me a racist as they quote a sentence here and there.

I've always chosen my words very carefully, Kent, so I stand by everything I say, and if you find the below passage abhorrent, for example, then write a refutation of it, but to join the lynch mob and call me a racist is no way to act as a true intellectual.

"In every field besides sports, entertainment and politics, blacks are failing spectacularly against all other races, a fact readily admitted to by blacks and black apologists themselves as evidence of America's racism and oppression of blacks. America is racist, but so is every other country and person, for racism, at core, is merely an extension and manifestation of innate self-love. One loves oneself, family then nation, which is made up of those that share one's language, above all, as well as culture and history, if not also a physical similarity.

Loving oneself and kind doesn't mean having a right to violate anybody else, obviously, and if one favors another race over one's own, then that, too, is racism. No one is color blind."

Linh, this is obviously an important discussion. You are right that simply labeling you racist is abandoning thinking. Because both Kent and I are involved in preparing for the holidays, we can't really do it justice till things settle after Christmas. We will pop in from time to time when we can.

But let me say this—we are coming at the discussion from different directions. I'm telling you what I see and hear, and you are just denying it. Regardless of what you think you mean, or who your (Jewish) friends are, the word, "Jewish" refers to all Jews. All Jews are Jewish. So when you utter the phrase, "Jewish Power," regardless of what you think you mean, of what limits you place on it in your imagination, what you are actually saying in the social/political world of our experience refers to all Jews. You could qualify it and say "the power of some Jewish people." But that isn't as dramatic. Can't work as a slogan, like "Jewish Power."

Such abstractions destroy specificity. It's true in art and poetry, and it's true in politics. They are a tool of demagogues for that reason — Trump's "Mexican murderers and rapists. They generalize hatred. Once specificity is destroyed, it's easy to mobilize mobs. And trust me, the mob that goes after "Jewish Power" will not differentiate between the Rothschilds and your editor. They have been doing it for millennia to greater or lesser degrees, pogrom after pogrom. So you can kiss his ass goodbye.

Linh,

As Mike said, we'll probably have to wait until after Christmas to get back to this and post the exchange. Feel free to write in the meantime. We will answer when we can and put together the exchange, without any editing of your comments. Unlike virtually every other "poetry" site or publication in North America, we are fully committed to uncensored debate here at Dispatches.

But just to say, for now, since we can be nothing but honest in a distressed discussion like this, that the exchange between us may not be pretty.

I find your recent Holocaust denying remarks alarming and reprehensible. And your barely veiled suggestion, in your article "Blacks, Jews, and You" (in the alt-right Unz Review) that the Pittsburgh synagogue murders last October were faked is beyond and beneath any comment. These recent, jaw-dropping proposals of yours, fully in line with the most vicious, crazed far-right polemics extant, makes your pleas for the credibility of your "Jewish power" formulations laughable.

You have slipped and slid, and at great velocity, Linh, into "Protocols of the Elders of Zion" territory.

It is not unprecedented for naive ultra-Leftists (your longstanding support of crazy 9/11 conspiracy theories had you in that category) to flip over into far-right ideology (there are many sad cases from pre-WWII Italy and Germany, for example), but I am surprised and truly sorrowed it has happened to you. I hope you will come to your senses and save yourself, soon.

None of which even gets into your remarkably racist innuendo about people of African descent, in that same article.

We will have time, if you wish to continue, to talk about this "Jewish power" thing, along with whatever other neo-fascist bullshit you are "proud" of. I know you have lots of backers, from your involvement with this Unz Review rag and RT (the former Russia Today). I just posted the below at Unz. I'm starting to lose my patience with your attitude, so behave like civil adults or our exchange is over. Kent, I defended you and your son when it wasn't the best time to do so, and was even willing to sever my relationship with Poetry Foundation to interview Brooks, and here you are, speaking in to me as if I have gone mad, and Mike calling me a hypocrite and accusing me of acting in bad faith. You guys are unbelievable.

Mike,

I'm not censoring anything. I worked a full day yesterday, then had to deal with how to deal with my Wikipedia entry, ate dinner, slept, so here I am, answering you at 2:51AM, after you've called me a hypocrite and accusing me of acting in bad faith, and after Kent has spoken to me in very condescending and sneering tone. It's you and Kent who have called me names. I have not insulted you and Kent once.

Since I'm being attacked by many people, I need time to figure out how to handle each accusation, and this on top of working in my brother in law's recycling plant, plus other responsibilities. I have already explained to you that my schedule is insane, and here you are, acting all indignant and calling me names. It is truly unbelievable, you and Kent's attitude.

Linh, don't jump the gun here. I did not accuse you of either hypocrisy or bad faith. I very carefully qualified both statements as conditional on your further response.

What am I to think when I come across carefully selected portions of our exchange that make it look like Kent and I are the same old morally self-righteous sjw's? It did occur to me that you would eventually be forthcoming with the rest of what we had said, not to mention the fact that we have agreed with you that name calling is not a productive way forward. That's why I was conditional. I am happy to go back to the comments section and revise my conditional judgement based on new information.

I'm sorry to hear of the multiple attacks on you . . . But, surely you expected that given the

That would involve talking to each other, however. It would involve a back and forth, an exchange in which we listened to each other.

Instead you prefer to doll up your toxic prejudices and superficialities as “important essays” and lob them at the world from behind a barricade manned by a bunch of intellectual thugs hurling insults.

That's too bad. I thought you might actually be interested in seriously engaging in a friendly conversation. My mistake.

Hi all,

Though I did nothing for it, I was listed as an editor at Dispatches from the Poetry Wars, for before this internet campaign against me, my name was still cool, at least in the sad American poetry ghetto that's populated almost entirely by university writing students and their professors.

Kent Johnson and Michael Boughn are the principal editors at Poetry Dispatches, and I've long considered Kent a dear friend. Needing to get rid of me, Kent didn't address me directly, however, but only as a carbon copy [Cc] in an email to Mike:

Hi all,

I had to stay up until 3AM to deal with the accusations against me. My lynch mob is most active on Twitter and FaceBook, two mind-controlling platforms I don't participate in. To mess with public perception, FaceBook even delete "likes" after articles, and I know this because they've done it to all mine, a fact I innocently attributed to a "dislike" button, which people finally told me didn't even exist.

In any case, since I'm being convicted in public, I will defend myself in public. Here are two emails from a few hours ago:

Hi Kent [Johnson],
